INTRODUCTION

Hi Folks,

Once again, please accept my apologies for the reduced newsletters recently. Life and death got in the way! Hopefully, so long as nobody dies on me or gets ill over the next couple of days, I'll be able to produce something more back to normal, this week!

We have some new review material for you this week, including a Final Review and a New Review.

The League Table is back and has been brought up to date, in a slightly altered form, due to the change in policy as regards the periods of the reviews. Backing Star has shot to the top of the table, with Betfair Success Formula and Betting Profits Soccer chasing it, each with over 50% profit on the Start Bank.

We'd like to hear from you, please contact me by e-mail via the Bloggers Corner at rich@bettingssystemtruths.com

Lay Hounds Introduction

Review Manager David-Introduces Lay Hounds

Hi Bloggers

Well just for a change I thought I would do a review of a different sport this time greyhound racing, and a service called Lay Hounds. As the name applies it is laying dogs to lose. E-mails are sent out in good time and of course selections can be in the morning, afternoon or evening. Now I actually started receiving selections last Monday the 11th so this will be when the actual review will commence, but I have been following the markets live for a week now because I wanted to get an idea of how they worked, one of the issues with greyhound racing is that there is no results available that give the betfair prices, both myself and Betfan who are promoting this service have tried to find a site that may offer this facility but to no avail. So unfortunately Betfan have had to record results to industry prices which is less than ideal but given there is no other option they had no choice. So the Lay Hounds service recommends not laying a greyhound greater than 8/1(9.00) this is industry prices, now the first thing I noticed is that some of these 8/1 shots can be very high to lay on Betfair as example on Friday 15th one of the selections that was 8/1 SP was 25.00 on Betfair to lay and this was the shortest price I could get. So using my experience with Betfair Miracle I would suggest if using a bot or even manually set the maximum lay limit to 11.00. So do these 8/1 shots win yes occasionally in March it happened twice so I feel that fairest and safest way is to set limits both at SP and Betfair Lays prices. If you were using a bot I would set it to lay a few seconds before the off, the same manually even more so than horseracing most of the money on dogs goes on in the last minute, also liquidity can be a problem I have seen several races where over 15,000 pounds has been matched but it is a poor relation if compared to horse racing.

So what can we expect in the way of result from Lay Hounds well here is the breakdown for the last 6 months now originally some of these months included any odds but I have applied the no greater than 8/1 SP rule on them.

Layhounds Results October to March

Month	No of Selections	Winning Lays	Strike Rate
October	44	41	93.20%
November	38	32	84.21%
December	38	31	81.58%
January	44	38	86.36%
February	39	35	89.74%
March	50	42	84%
Totals	253	219	86.58%

Not a bad strike rate, now I would have liked to say what the average lay price and also the average odds of the losing lays (winners) was but it would be pure speculation hopefully the initial 56 day review will shed more light on this. I am hoping to acquire a bot to test this service at the moment I am following the races live so odds will be recorded to the lowest lay price I can get in the last minute of betting, I will be using 1 point level stakes and operating with a 50 point bank as per Lay Hounds the longest Losing run they have had is 3 and that happened only once so this should be enough , and I shall not be laying any greyhound over 8/1(9.00) SP or 11:00 on the lay market with Betfair. So on with the review.

Regards

RM Dave

Final Reviews

Place 2 Profit – Final Review by Sgt Rich

Rating: ★★★★★

A quick recap, this is a tipping service that sends daily e-mails of tips in two categories "Hotshots" and "Longshots". All bets are for a place only and my results are based upon Betfair SP for a place. You could also use BetDaq and Totesport which also run a Place Only market.

This tipping service is rather difficult to assess and give a final pass or fail to. Mainly because the results have been fairly inconsistent. All results are reported after 5% betfair commission on winning bets.

As you can see in the above graph of the betting balance, the period of the review can be split into three sections. Depending on when you subscribed to the tips you would have very different experiences and differing views of the service.

Section A shows an initial profit before drifting down to 22.69 points. If you had been a subscriber during this 25 day period I doubt you would have continued.

Section B shows a complete turnaround! The bank rising consistently from 22.69 points to 59.68 points over 31 days. A subscriber during this period would have been delighted with the profits the tips made! Day 42 is of particular note when a profit of 14.85 points was made. But even without that one exceptionally good day, the profit shows a nice upward trend during this period.

Section C covers the extended review period from Day 57 to Day 84 and it shows a steady, but slight, decline of the bank. Until day 84 when a massive 15.38 points profit was made on Grand National day! This was based upon a good Hotshot double and a very good Longshot place on State of Play – 4th in the Grand National.

During this Section C of 28 days, a subscriber would have been left cold by the results until the final day. This begs the question how representative would Grand National day be as regards the place odds, compared to a more normal racing day?

But a profit is a profit. Without that great last day, the final bank would have been 51.84 points from a start of 50 points. Nothing too impressive, but the middle period of the review is certainly impressive. This is the benefit of a relatively long review period – It gives us a good overall picture – good periods and bad periods.

Breakdown of results

We had:

67 Hotshot bets, most of them being doubles.

36 bets won and 31 lost. Giving a strike rate of 53.73%

and an overall profit of 30.45 points, based upon the recommended stakes. ( 317 points staked, 30.45 points profit – Return on Investment of 9.61%)

and a level stakes profit of 3.2 points based upon 1 point level stakes. (67 points staked, 3.2 points profit – Return on Investment of 4.78%)

We had:

89 Longshot bets, most of them being singles, but with 19 doubles and 1 treble.

24 bets won and 65 lost. Giving a strike rate of 26.97%

and an overall loss of -13.23 points, based upon recommended level stakes of 1 point. (Return on Investment of -14.87%)

The combined results are:

156 Hotshot & Longshot bets,

60 bets won and 96 lost. Giving a strike rate of 38.46%

and an overall profit of 17.22 points, based upon the recommended stakes. (Return on Investment of 4.24%)

and a level stakes loss of -10.03 points based upon 1 point level stakes. (Return on Investment of -6.43%)

NB There was an error in my spreadsheet, during the review period where I missed entering in a result of -1.00 points. I have adjusted that in these figures.

From the above, it is clear that maximum profit during the review period would have been obtained by following the Hotshots to recommended stakes and ignoring the Longshot tips. Especially when we take into account the good final day results when the Longshots made a total profit of 5.60 points.

[There were two Placepot (fun bets) which lost, giving a cumulative P/L: -20.00 points - but as they are fun bets, they are not part of this Final Review.]

So I must admit to being surprised by the success of this tipping service. During the review period, especially up to Day 25, I expected it to fail after 56 days and even lose all the 50 point starting bank.

I have included level stakes results and Return On Investment (ROI) results as they make a useful comparison measure with other services. But the final judgement must be on the actual service as given by the Tipster. The Longshots are given to 1 point level stakes and the Hotshots are given to variable stakes which have been between 1 point doubles to 8 point doubles as reported in the daily blog. These are the results that I am basing my final rating upon.

If you had followed all the tips, over 84 days you would have made a nice profit of  $17.22/50 = 34.44\%$  of 50 point starting bank . You would have made an even greater profit ( $30.45/50 = 60.90\%$  of 50 point starting bank) if you had ignored the Longshot tips.

There are three subscription options, either £47 for one month; £94 for three months; or £141 for six months. This cost needs to be factored in to the profitability of the service and depends upon the size of your bank and stakes. For the 84 days you would have needed at least three months subscription at either £141 (3 x £47) or £94. If you had a bank of £50 and £1 per point stakes then your approximately £30 or £17 profit would not have covered the cost. If you had a £500 bank and £10 per point stakes then your profit of approximately £300 or £170 profit would have covered the cost. And so on ...

The great unknown is will this success continue? This is the problem with all tipping services. With mathematical methods, one can be fairly certain the results will continue, once one has a large enough sample size. For this tipping service we have a sample of 84 days (there were only 2 no-bets days), which is quite large, but tips depend upon the tipster continuing to maintain their form. However we cannot pass or fail a tipping service based upon either fear or optimism about future results, we can only pass or fail based upon the review period.

If Betfan, are good enough to continue sending me the tips I will return to this review as and when time allows to give an idea of on-going success or failure of the service.

So in conclusion here are my review assessments of the service:

Profitability compared to liquidity needed: 3 stars out of 5: 17 or 30 points profit on a 50 point bank is good. The loss on the Longshots takes away from this somewhat.

Ease of use: 3 stars out of 5: quite easy – get the e-mail, go to Betfair, place the bets. The only complication is for the doubles, one needs to put the stake on the first bet and depending upon the result after Betfair commission, place the original stake plus net winnings on the second bet. If you are not used to this, it can seem complicated until you “get” it.

Risk: 3 stars out of 5: it lost half the bank in the first 25 days, but the total bank of 50 points was adequate to cover this losing run.

Return on investment (ROI): 2 stars out of 5: Approx 4 to 10% ROI for the Hotshots or combined Hotshots/Longshots is OK. A negative -10% ROI for Longshots – not so good! I have to review both kinds of bets combined so the average of 4.24% is OK.

Support and documentation: 4 stars out of 5: The tips came through without fail, every day from Betfan and there is the backup web site if you don't get them. Just once, the tip failed to give the size of bet on the Hotshot double and I had to make a guess of an average from previous tips. A minor omission over 84 days.

Time needed to apply the system: 4 stars out of 5: Very quick to read the emails and place the bet, except for the calculation of stake to put on the second bet in a double, as noted above.

The average of the above is 3.17 stars, so I am passing this system with a rating of 3.0 stars. With a strong caveat that the final profits/losses were greatly affected by one final day producing unrepresentative day profits of 9.77 points on Hotshots and 5.6 points on Longshots. But the actual results of the total review period are the thing that affects the final rating, so these good final day results must be included and taken into account in my rating. You could take the final day profits off the final results and use that to make up your own mind.

Bloggers Corner

We've had a warning this week from Mike. Please let us know if you get your money back.

Hi Rich, I don't know if you remember or not a couple of months ago I asked if anybody had had any dealings with a service called. SportsPicks2Win.

It's a service that covers many sports but all the results are lies.

I have asked for my money back as it has a money back guarantee but all I get is a ticket no. And that's it.

It is run by a Toby Huckins.

I have waited 3 months for my money back and decided it's not going to come. And I would like you to warn all your subscribers that this service is not to be trusted. At all.

Oh it cost £49 per week. I thought basically you pay for what you get (how wrong could I be)
Regards Mike

Admin:

"The above comment is the solely the opinion of Mike, and not BST, he would appear to have had a problem with this vendor, and wishes to warn our readers"

Admin, Gordon has also sent me this message:

We are going to be starting a review of a selection service called Turf Wars shortly. It is a football selection service run by a lady called Lisa Powell, and offers selections across a wide range of bets. This is a Betfan service, and readers of BST will be able to get an exclusive 5 day free trial, when signing up via our link.

More info on this this offer will be included when the Introduction Review is posted.

League Table of Current Reviews

We are back up and running with the league table again. The systems under review have different starting banks, different stakes and some systems have variable stakes. A reasonable way of comparing the performance of systems is to work out the profit (or loss) as a percentage of the starting bank.

Previously, we averaged that figure over the number of the days of the review. But our review policy has altered. Some reviews are carried out for a set number of calendar days whether there is a bet that day or not and some are carried out for a set number of betting days and the no-bet days are not counted. Therefore we would not be comparing like with like if we averaged the profit over the days of the review. So now I am just comparing the profit as a %age of starting bank.

Obviously this table doesn't replace reading the reviews, because profit %age of bank is not the only factor in judging a system. Nevertheless, I think it gives a valid comparison and an at-a-glance way of bringing the mass of data together.

Profitability Graph

Here is a graph of the profit being made by the front-runners as a percentage of their starting bank. This gives a week by week comparative view of their progress.

It gives a representation of the volatility or dependability of each system. Ideally we would want a graph that increased each week by roughly the same amount. If a system or tipping service could produce that, then we would really have a winning review!

Betfair Success Formula was leading, but as explained in the review, one result going the wrong way would cause another big fall. Due to family commitments I haven't had chance to do matches these past three weeks. It will be interesting to see if the success continues now I am back up and running with the review. Backing Star Plan is catching the eye! Will the success continue? Betting Profits Soccer continues to do well.

Systems, Methods or Tips.

There are three types of services that “experts” offer us. They broadly fall into the categories of systems, methods or tips.

Systems: These are a set of rules that are used to make selection criteria. Hopefully these rules are hard and fast without room for interpretation or discretion. I did review a service, a while ago, that included a “discretionary” rule. It was a nightmare, it made it almost impossible to cross-check published past results, as it was unclear how much “discretion” was applied to get the results that were published! But hopefully if you buy a system, the rules are exact and you have no doubt as to when something is a selection and when it is not. Some variants of this include software or bots that make the selections for you, based upon rules that may be kept secret from you. Nevertheless, the assumption is that the software is sticking to exact and unvarying rules.

Methods or Strategies: These services are based upon loose rules or advices that are applied, with skill, by the user of the service. A common form of this is based upon the odds and changes in the odds before the off, or changes in the odds, in-play. Often you are given criteria to give you the selection to concentrate on. But the bet (or lay) only becomes a bet if the odds perform in a certain way. Sometimes quite bit of skill and experience is needed before you can decide if there is a bet or not, or when to trade out a bet that you have already placed. On BST we have had quite a few methods like this, Betfair Success Formula, that I am currently reviewing, is such a system, where different users may well come up with different football matches, based upon, among other things, whether they think the odds offered are in their favour as per the advice given by the author of the service. Another example, reviewed by Review Manager David, in the past, was Betfair ATM. If you read David’s blog for this one, you will see how he had to develop the skills needed to follow the advice and make a profit.

Tips: This is the simplest to define and follow. You receive tips from the service provider of back or lay bets and you back the tips to the recommended stakes or to level stakes. I’ve just finished reviewing such a tipping service called Place 2 Profit.

Each of these has their advantages and disadvantages. Which do you prefer? As far as possible, I am, from this week on, going to start designating each of the current reviews as a Tipping Service, a System or a Method/Strategy. I hope this is going to be helpful for readers.

Advantages/Disadvantages:

Below, on the next page, are some advantages and disadvantages of each them. Please feel free to contact me if you have any to add to my lists. rich@bettingssystemtruths.com

Advantage/Disadvantage	System	Method/Strategy	Tipping Service
Advantage	Once paid, if in printed format, the rules are there for you to use forever.	Once paid for, the printed advice is yours to use forever
Disadvantage	If in software form, you may have to pay on-going license fees to continue using the system	You might not make a profit initially while you learn to use the advice skillfully.	You have to continue paying the subscription to continue getting the bets and have to factor in the subscription cost to the profit or loss the tips are making
Advantage	If based upon a good large sample of previous results, there is every reason to suppose the success rate will continue, on average, over time.	Often these are based upon mathematical rules, or logic based upon how the market is reacting. If these are logical they should continue to produce profit, because Betfair, in particular, follows the actual probability of the outcome almost exactly.	The tipster, to some extent needs success to continue getting his subscriptions. So he should be working hard to get good results.
Disadvantage	If based upon a small sample of results or if the system rules are based upon illogical selection criteria, chosen just to produce good back-results, then the system may well fail in the future.	If part of the strategy involves Bookmaker odds, these by no means follow probability, as the Bookie is only interested in balancing his book to make a profit on average. This can skew your success, or sometimes the Bookie just doesn't behave according to logical probability.	The tipster could lose interest if his tips are failing and go on to provide a new tipping service. Past success from the tipster is no guarantee that he will continue his good form.
Advantage		Different users will either pick different selections or place their bets at different odds. So the available funds and the odds in the market should not be adversely affected.

Disadvantage	Everyone picks the same selection which could cause problems if the market does not have enough funds (liquidity) to support the bets, causing the odds to shorten. Advantage	Sometimes the rules are quick to check. You can get your bets on early to avoid being by the computer at race time.	Can control your profit and loss to some extent.	Simple and quick. Can get your bets on early, to avoid being by the computer at race time.
Disadvantage	Sometimes the rules are time-consuming to check through.	Need to be in front of the computer for a period of time either before the race or often close to race time.	Can't always get the odds advised by the tipster.

I'm sure there are more advantages and disadvantages. Please let me know if you can think of any.

So, System, Method or Tips, which do you prefer? Over the next couple of weeks I will add to the current reviews a note, describing the type of each service, to help you in your decision making.
