I've started incorporating the best of the LayTheOdds reviews into our newsletter. So from now on, the BST newsletter will include even more product reviews! In the Current Reviews section of this newsletter, the LayTheOdds reviews are in violet to help differentiate them

The results, league table and profitability graph include Tuesday evening reports, making the newsletter as up to date as possible when you receive the newsletter on the Wednesday morning.

Bonus Bagging, from LayTheOdds has shown great profit in the three weeks of the review. We are waiting eagerly for the week 4 figures. New kids on the block, ABSX have got off to a great start.

ABSX System X-IV – Introduction

7th July 2011

Introducing The Machine Version 2...
Auto Bet System X-IV

Admin Announcement

Whilst we all remember the unpleasantness at the time ABSX System X-IV was launched, we here at BST & LTO believe we are fair minded, so despite our misgivings about the original marketing campaign and some of its content, we are going to give the product a chance to speak for itself.

It is now some 3 months since the launch of ABSX System X and it's still alive and kicking, one of our reviewers, sergeant Tommy, has been monitoring its progress, and we believe it is now the time to test it in front of our readers.

This will be a full and fair review, and should the product stand up, then it will just go to show that the "questionable", in our opinion, marketing techniques were unnecessary in the first place.

So, over to Sergeant Tommy for the introduction of ABSX System X-IV

Regards

Gordon

Sergeant Tommy-Introduces *ABSX System X-IV

Hi Bloggers,

Ok, so after a few days rest watching Murray getting beat yet again at 'Wimbers', I am back with a bang to take on the 'Auto Bet System X -IV' product or ABSX System X-IV as I will refer to it from here on in.

Gordon and the powers that be at BST towers have agreed to a comprehensive review of the product which I have in fact been monitoring personally for the last several weeks just to get a handle on the pretty large pack of information which comes supplied with ABSX System X-IV

At the moment there are 2 packages available, the ABSX System X-IV complete system which you can get for 27 quid, and the ABSX System X-IV complete system + lifetime access to the ABSX-IV 'Machine' and 'Profit Monitor', which come in at 57 GBP.

Now with each package there are a host of pdf files and videos to go through which would take a lot longer to explain if I went through every document individually. Here is just a brief overview of what you receive with the 'ABSX' standard package.

Basic method pdf – 66 page file explaining exactly how each race is broken down in terms of profitability and historical analysis and given a specific rating based on that analysis.

There are many other documents including a staking plan, DVI reckoner, Integration methods, odds converter and a comprehensive study of the Irish racing year.

The basic package is therefore a self-study guide for analysing every single race in the days programme and coming up with suitable betting opportunities as appropriate. This is all done manually with pen and paper with the basic package and can take between 30 minutes to an hour each day.

Now if you want to take all the hard work out of the equation then this is where the upgraded version comes into play.

The 'Machine' and 'Profit Monitor' are 2 pieces of software which enable the user to instantly recognize where the 'potentially' profitable opportunities are during the days racing. Having used both of these for several weeks now, I can say they are a couple of 'nifty' pieces of equipment. Very important point to remember is that these are tools to be used with your own betting experience and methodology, and NOT to be followed blindly.

If ALL the recommendations from the 'profit monitor' won, I would be composing this intro from a beach in Hawaii!!

The upgraded version also includes a suite of videos with information on 'quad sequencing', 'ABSX-IV' win methods, target driven cross method staking, group betting and all the necessary paperwork you need for successful recording and analysis or results.

Now to the 'meat and gravy'!

For the purposes of the review I will be recording 2 sets of results.

1. ALL the recommendations made by the 'profit monitor', these will be either 'dutch' bets (backing both 1st and 2nd favs to win), 'dutch parlay' bets (strong recommended bets to be used in a 'parlay' sequence) and 'win' bets. These will be broken down into 'purple', 'green', 'blue', 'amber' and 'red' bets where 'purple' is the strongest and 'red' the weakest bets.

2. My actual betting methodology for gaining between 0.5% and 2% profit each day. This will involve a combination of 'dutch' and 'place' bets where I have identified, through analysis, exactly which races to make my 'dutch' and 'place' bets. I will report each bet exactly as I make it each day.

Staking Plan.

My starting bank will be 100pts for each set of results.

The author recommends making between 5% and 10% per day on your betting bank. I will stake between 2% and 10% of my 100pt bank as follows:

'red' bets – 2% of bank

'amber' – 4%

'blue' – 6%

'green' – 8%

'purple' – 10%

(when and if I reach 5% profit, I will stop for the day, but still record the rest of the days results)

I will also record level staking of 1 pt on each recommended bet.

For the 2nd set of results, I will plan to make 0.3% profit of my bank on each bet, be it a 'dutch' or 'place' bet. I will show my exact stake for each bet as I play them.

I will be betting sequentially until a win is found. Phew....!

I look forward to a very interesting few weeks ahead and hopefully a new piece of artillery to add to our betting arsenal!

All the best, Sgt Tommy.

Profitable Lays – Introduction

10th July 2011

Profitable Lays
The successful high gain - low risk strategy

Let me show you a laying system that has so far made over £700 profit a month using just £25 stakes to easily recorded Betfair SP prices that requires no prior racing knowledge, mathematics, science or luck. Profitable Lays finds an average of 4 to 5 races a day to bet on, with an average losing S.P of just 11/8.

Inspector DJ-Introduces Profitable Lays

Hello Bloggers,

My name is David Aston, and I was one of the new inspectors recruited for the new Lay The Odds website in December 2010.

Why Inspector DJ? I decided that, as there are a few Davids around here, I wanted to be identified by you guys a little more easily.

I have been betting seriously for nearly four years now, mainly by arbitrage betting, after an idea came into my head after looking at a system. As always, the bookies caught up with me, reducing my bets to a level where they became next to useless.

I have previously trialled services on other websites, Cashmaster and the Secret Betting Club, to name just but two.

I have previously trialled Soccer Overs, Sports Profit Network and Its Lay Time for Lay The Odds. I have had a bit of a break, due to being away, and some minor health issues, but I am back now to review Profitable Lays.

As I am sure you have found, some systems work (at least for a while) and some just don't. So far each of the trials I have undertaken has been unsuccessful. Hopefully, Profitable Lays will not come into the same category.

What is Profitable Lays?

Profitable Lays is an e-book of just 14 pages, written by Chris Adams.

The cost of purchasing the manual is currently £67, discounted from its normal price of £97.

The selections produce place lay bets at Betfair SP for UK mainland races, and there is no requirement to watch races or the markets.

This review will initially last for 56 betting days, and I expect bets to be found on a daily basis. Depending on how the trial goes during this period, the review may extend to 84 days.

Each selection is to be laid at a value of one point. The manual does not make a provision for a bank, so I will start the review with a bank of 100 points.

I would normally like to publish the selections provided from the system, but as I feel that this would give an indication of how the selections are arrived at, each days entry will just show the number of selections for the day, how many bets were won, and the profit or loss for the day.

The first results will be shown here tomorrow, and I look forward to seeing how this system performs during the review.

Until tomorrow everyone,

Inspector DJ

The Two Heads System – Final Review

7th July 2011

Inspector Karl- Reviews the Two Heads System

Hi Bloggers,

The Two Heads System is promoted by Sportsworld publishing and costs £97, you also get access to a phone number for 30 days to help you learn the process. After that you need to buy the printed version of the Racing Post at £60 per month, so the Two Heads System is not the cheapest of systems. There are many selections per day, backing Win and Place, Place only and Lay or Back the place depending on price.

Let's look at the final stats for the Two Heads System.

Trial Total +21.10

Staked 458

ROI +4.61%

So as you can see we ended up with a small profit, however you would of outlayed £220 to achieve that, it is important to remember it is not all just about the profit, sure it is nice to be in a plus position, but my role is to look at the whole picture, and I strongly believe that the Two Heads System is just too much work and expense to warrant a continued review.

There is an issue in that the author had already tried this and came to the conclusion it did not work, We checked with SWP when we become aware of this, and they confirmed that they believed it to be the same system.

In my opinion, the Two Heads System feels like it was created quickly, it just does not feel right, it feels clunky it is not well written and feels forced, and is quite confusing, it goes on about going against the market, yet the rules mean you rely on the market to tell you if you back or lay a horse!

The rules are quite complex, the author promised a bot, however a decision to not use a bot was decided after the vendor said "no bot as the rules are too complicated"! The system all revolves around odds of 10.0 for the lay or back selections and anyone who uses for example, Betfair Miracle, will know how awkward it can be when following live odds just before the off.

Let me explain why I want to look at more than just profit

Do you have a life bloggers? Are you like me and as my wife calls me "Billy no mates" i.e do you ever go out between 2.30pm and 9.30pm at any point over 364 Days, I am going to guess a lot of you do, so that means this system only really applies to a fraction of the market. Can you guarantee you will be able to watch live the races just before the off every day without fail?

You see that is the major problem, you can never miss a day as our review showed we had 1 good day in 56 days, all the rest were losses and small wins, had we missed that one 30pt day, we would still be in the red.

So if you have the ability to watch Live races every day

Happy to buy racing post every day (£60 per month)

Understand if the odds are around 10.0 you will need to make a decision on a back or lay scenario. So with it requiring such a high level of commitment to run the Two Heads System, I feel I have no option to fail it.

One more thing about SWP's phone line when you phone in for the selections you will need the hearing of a Meer cat and the secretarial skills of a genius, especially when the woman gives you the selection whilst she is on the train!

I kid you not!

The Two Heads System..... yes a small profit, but on balance.....FAILED

Regards

Inspector Karl

The BetPlan Final Review

10th July 2011

Final Review of "The Betplan" by Sergeant Karl

Hello Bloggers,

The Betplan is a horse racing backing system which predominately bets on Horses at the top end of the market, it costs £49.99 a month, emails were received daily without issue, and the vendor was helpful throughout the review.

The logic behind the system is that we get early prices, so in essence we get the value, unfortunately however just because we got the value prices does not mean the horses will win, and as it turned out this was sadly the case.

Let's look at our final results

Ratchet System (1000 bank-5% Stake. Min Stake £50)

Current Bank £265.39

FLAT STAKES

Trial Total

-16.20

Staked 159

ROI -10.18%

Betting System Truths Weekly Newsletter © Enigma Media 2011

As we can see flat stakes pretty much failed easily, however that is not what the vendor recommends, he recommends the ratchet system, using a 5% stake with the min stake being £50. We can see that also failed quite badly, losing us over £700

I am not a fan of the min stake idea, as the benefit of a ratchet system is that in the losing runs you are protected slightly as stakes get lower, by having a min stake we are betting far too much on a small bank, at one point we only had 3 bets left in our bank pot, that is far too aggressive. I appreciate the flip side is you recover more quickly

During the review we never looked like winning, and to be honest it was almost always downwards.

The author said that there had been a data feed issue and that this was responsible for the poor results, the problem is that even after the "data feed" issue had been resolved we only really had one week where we had terrific form and got back to £600 from £170 but we then hit another bad patch where only 2 horses out of 9 won. I must point out that the author stressed that he did not expect me to let his reasons add any weighting to final review

It seems to become the age old problem with backing short odds horses, when the winners came they were not sufficient odds to undo the losses, you really need such a high SR% to make a profit at short odds, and the little blips can really hurt the bank.

There is another version of the BetPlan which uses a bot to check conditions, draw etc, which seems to be having more success than the stand alone selections, so there may be a re-review at some point in the future using the Bot version of the service.

The Betplan version I reviewed on this occasion has failed.

Regards

Sergeant Karl

League Table of Current Reviews

Return to Contents/Index of this newsletter

The systems under review have different starting banks, different stakes and some systems have variable stakes. A reasonable way of comparing the performance of systems is to work out the profit (or loss) as a percentage of the starting bank. Obviously this table doesn't replace reading the reviews, because profit as %age of bank is not the only factor in judging a system. Nevertheless, I think it is a valid at-a-glance way of bringing the mass of data together.

I've colour coded the reviews that are the currently most successful, with the colour of their profitability graph to make them easier to spot. Some of the older or suspended reviews have been taken off to make the graph look clearer.

Sprint Lay Expert has slipped down the table after two bad weeks.

Profitability Graph

Here is a graph of the profit being made by the front-runners as a percentage of their starting bank. This gives a week by week comparative view of their progress.

It gives a representation of the volatility or dependability of each system. Ideally we would want a graph that increased each week by roughly the same amount. If a system or tipping service could produce that, then we would really have a winning review!

It is early days yet for Major League Profits and ABSX, but the Low lay has lost most of its profit. After weeks of dwindling losses, Rate The Races has had four great weeks.

I've had this question from a reader, concerning Betting Profits Soccer System, which is suspended until the start of the football season:

Hi, I am currently looking at systems to use in the new football season. The above system using your reviewer's idea of dutching the correct scores is very interesting. I don't understand however the meaning of the line, "any unquoted" Could you clarify that for me please? Also the percentage amount at the bottom of the odds list in blue does not seem to relate to anything, please could you enlighten me on this figure? Thank you in anticipation, great site by the way!

Here's my answer:

"Any Unquoted" refers to the line in the Betfair correct score market which covers any score other than the specific scores quoted in the market (i.e. 0-0, 1-0, etc up to 3-3). In effect it covers the possibility that one team scores 4 or more goals.

The %age figure is calculated as follows. Every price has a probability expressed as a percentage. For example 2.0 (1/1 or evens) has a probability of winning of 50% – 3.0 (2/1) has a probability of 33% – 4.0 (3/1) has a probability of 25%. Generally Betfair prices almost exactly measure the real probability of success, on average. In fact Betfair prices are stunningly accurate over a period of time.

A dutching tool like ArbCruncher gives you the total percentage of all the bets being placed. If you covered every single bet in the correct score market on betfair the total would be 100% or just a little over. With a Bookie, the total (the "overround") would be something like 110% or 115% to cover their profit.

So I include the total percentage of the bets covered in my system. If the total is something like 75% it means the theoretical probability of having the correct score included in your bets is 75% with a 25% chance of losing. It is there just to give an idea of the extent to which the field is covered by the selected bets.

The idea of my system is to pick matches which have a bias towards one side in particular winning and covering most of the likely scores in the hope that the Betfair market prices do not reflect this bias accurately. If the prices do not reflect the detected bias, then a quoted 75% chance of having the correct score is hopefully low.

The success rate of my selections, so far, has been 79% – so you can see that if the usual %age is around 75% but the actual %age success is 79% – then a profit is being made.

The review will continue when genuine competitive soccer restarts and some form is established – probably around early September.
