INTRODUCTION

Hi Folks,

We have two New Reviews, and two Final Reviews this week. Both Déjà Vu Football and Sam's Lucky 9 Lays failed their reviews.

This week's league table again has Betting Grenade at #2. It's far too early yet to judge Power Naps. On the graph of the profit being made by the front runners, as a percentage of their starting bank, Flat Ratings Pro still looks promising.

Profit expressed as a percentage of start bank is not everything. Please read the full reviews of anything that interests you!

We'd like to hear from you, please contact me by e-mail via the Bloggers Corner at rich@bettingsystemtruths.com

Laying Spring Profits – Introduction

Sgt Tony- Introduces Laying Spring Profits

Hi Bloggers

Welcome to another new system review. Well, having said that, it is kind of new! You will no doubt be familiar with Chris Castell and his Laying Winter Profits, Laying Summer Profits and Laying Autumn Profits systems. In a somewhat unsurprising move, Chris has rounded off the whole offering by announcing the launch of Laying Spring Profits!

Laying Spring Profits runs from 1 March to 31 May and therefore completes the whole twelve month cycle. In March Laying Spring Profits concentrates on UK National Hunt racing, whilst in April and May Laying Spring Profits concentrates on UK Flat racing. For all three months, the lay odds must lie between 1.75 and 6.30 on Betfair and Chris recommends only putting your lays on a few minutes before the off, to ensure that you can get within this price range. Laying Spring Profits will select horses to lay regardless of their price, so it is quite usual to receive lots of selections for the day that do not qualify because their price is above or below this recommended price range. To keep things simple, Chris uses the Betfair SP when calculating his results, but users of Laying Spring Profits may well obviously get better or worse prices dependent upon the time at which they place their bets.

Chris offers superb support for all of his systems and is extremely approachable and quick to respond to questions (this is the third of his systems that I have reviewed). As with his other three systems, Chris offers an easy to understand manual, together with some really comprehensive videos showing you how to use Laying Spring Profits. This bundle will set you back £97.

For those who prefer the 'lazy' option, Chris will also email you the selections every day (usually before midnight of the day before) for a one off payment of £198 for the whole three months, or a monthly payment of £75. He also maintains a web page with all the results kept up to date and the records from the last five years.

Chris bases all of his 4 systems on laying a fixed amount of £100 per selection, which will result in a profit of £95 per lay, after taking Betfair commission into account, should the horse oblige and lose the race. I will keep a tally of the cumulative cash bank, together with the level stakes results for those who prefer to use different staking methods, so 1 point will represent £100 in this case.

Chris is very keen to point out that he regards all four of his systems as being part of a whole 'package' which punters can use to bet all year around. If one of the 'seasons' does wobble a little, it should be recouped by the next 'seasonal' system. This is an interesting approach. There are many systems out there that only look at All Weather racing, or only look at Flat or NH racing, so there is a lot of merit in his approach of using a month by month set of rules and criteria to allow for different conditions etc.

Do check out his website if you need any further information, or feel free to ask me (or Chris) any questions.

Power Naps - Introduction + Day's 1 and 2

Sgt Tommy- Introduces Power Naps

Hi Bloggers,

So we get back on the road again with a new service from the 'betfan' stable.

This is a daily horse racing email service sending out 'power naps' each day with an advised stake to wager depending on the strength of the bet. (between 1 and 5 pts)

The service recommends you start with a 200 pt bank so that will be my starting bank.

So, on with the fun!

Dav1

2.40 southwell fantasy fry 3 points win 5/2 skybet (won)

4.50 taunton whizzar 13/8 2 points win boylesports (won)

Day2.

2.10 Doncaster American Laddie 2 points win 11/8 bet365 (lost)

P/L = + 8.75 pts

New bank = 208.75 pts

Overall flat stake profit = + 8.75 pts after 2 days.

Nice start for the service so let's see if it continues.

Deja Vu Football - Final Review

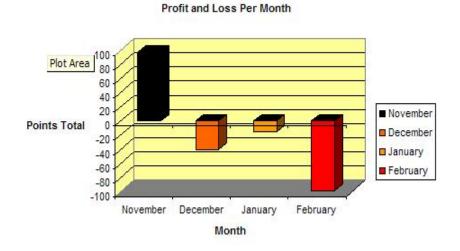

Review Manger David Reviews Deja Vu Football

DEJA VU FOOTBALL English Premiership ... Sectifsh Premiership...Bundestiga League

Hi Bloggers

I have been reviewing Deja Vu Football since November 6th 2010 to February 23rd 2011 this actually covered 84 days when we could have actually got a selection as per the heading Deja Vu Football covers only the English, German and Scottish premier leagues so if none of these leagues had any matches I considered it to be a Non Betting Day. So what is Deja Vu Football? It is a service which provides 4 scores per match in the hope of getting the correct score, given the name the vendor must base his selections on previous matches between the two sides. On to the review. Well Deja Vu Football started off like a house on fire and was 107.15 points up by November 27th unfortunately this was as good as it got, because after that it has been in a state of decline this is shown in the graph below:

With a poor performance in December and an awful February in between a smaller loss in January, if Deja Vu Football was a football team I think the manager would be looking for another job. You could say based on the monthly profit and loss that it was a review based on one good quarter and three bad but that would be a different sport so I have separated the statistics into 2 halves and then the final overall figures.

First Half (Days 1 to 42)

Matches 68/18 Correct Scores = 26.47% Strike Rate Now although that looks good we have 4 Bets per match 68 x 4 = 272 bets / 18 wins = 6.62% Strike Rate Average Odds of Winning Correct Scores = 18.175 Profit/Loss = plus 55.15 points

Second Half (Days 43 to 84)

Matches 104/26 Correct Scores = 25% Strike Rate 104 x 4 = 416 bets / 26 wins = 6.25% Strike Rate Average Odds of Winning Correct Scores = 10.88 Profit/Loss = minus 111.82 points

Full Time (Days 1 to 84)

Matches 172/44 Correct Scores = 25.58% Strike Rate 172 x 4 = 688 bets/ 44 wins = 6.39% Strike Rate Average Odds of Winning Correct Scores = 14.12(rounded off)

Profit/Loss = minus 56.67 points

Longest winning Run = 5 matches (once) Longest Losing Run = 13 matches (once)

So you would have staked a total of 688 points during the review period to make a loss of 56.67 points add to this a 45 pound per month subscription yard so based on our review period of nearly 4 months that would have been another 180 pounds to add to your losses. It has been mentioned on the comments section to this review that Deja Vu Football had a 81.00 winner in November also in this month it had a 50.00 correct score so we can only only imagine what kind of losses it would have occurred without these to bolster up the numbers. Unfortunately for Deja Vu Football it could not get any further winners at the higher prices in fact the next highest was odds of 34.00 and that was in November too, as can be seen the second half suffered a lower strike rate, a lot lower average winning odds and a hefty points loss.

So to sum up without hitting the higher odds winners more regularly or alternatively improving its strike rate Deja Vu Football will struggle badly, given the figures before me its a clear red card for this one. It should be noted I found an additional 0.20 points when I went over all the figures again not that it makes any difference to the outcome but I thought I would just mention it in case anyone was wondering why 56.87 loss is showing on Day 84 and 56.67 points here in the Final Review.

Sam's Lucky 9 Lays - Final Review

Sgt lan-Reviews Sam's Lucky 9 Lays

Hi Bloggers,

First let me apologise for the lateness of this final review. I have experienced a really hectic period combined with some major network issues in my area.

Final Review

For £9.99 per week, you get access to all selections for Sams Lucky 9 Lays that are provided in two formats. The first is an email sent out by the system author Sam, this is backed up by forum access to Betfan. During the trial of Sams Lucky 9 Lays there were 66 selections over the 84 betting days, which works out at just under 0.80 selections per day.

Selections are to be placed at Betfair SP odds with a maximum price range of 9.00, hence the name Sams Lucky 9 Lays. During the trial the maximum odds did reach the 9.00 mark but also went as low as 1.58. But herein lies the problem, with the amount of selections being low, it only takes one of the higher priced selections to win its race and your profit gets wiped out.

The trial started very well indeed, we won the first 11 selections in a row, and only lost on one selection out of the first 22, racing out to 17.80pts profit to level stakes. By this time 40 days of the trial had passed and for the next 24 days the system slowed down profit wise, and due to the odd losing selection wiping out previous profit runs the period returned a modest profit of +5.27pts, the total now +23.07pts.

It was from day 65 that things started to go downhill for Sams Lucky 9 Lays, between day 65 and 84 we had a strike rate of just 52.13%, it doesn't take a mathematician to work out that its nowhere near good enough. We lost 17.16pts, an even though we ended the trial in profit, some major cracks in the system had been uncovered.

I don't have any resounding proof, but I am of the belief that Sam on occasions is prone to chasing losses. There were quite a few occasions where after a losing day we all of a sudden got more than the normal 1 daily selection. At first I let this pass, but it started to become too frequent to be pure coincidence. Now any bettor worth his salt will tell you, that chasing losses is a mugs game, and is a road that only has one destination....the poor house.

Sams Lucky 9 Lays itself seems to be well run, although I personally prefer more accessibility to the author themselves. Support is managed via Betfan, now I know there has been lots of flippant comments in the past regarding their outfit. They are in my opinion a well run, well organised marketing firm. Any queries I have had with them in the past have always been dealt with promptly and effectively.

I have done some analysis on the trial results for the 84 days. And if you take into consideration the subscription fees you would have had to stake £22 as a level stake just to break even. When you consider the maximum liability at the highest odds is £176, you are going to need quite a large set of cahoonas let alone betting bank to play at those rates.

I have built a large database of Sams Lucky 9 Lays selections that I have used for these statistics and it is available to you upon request to admin. It's an interactive excel sheet and all you need to do is enter your initial bank amount and what number of points you would like to divide the bank by. These are defaulted to £1000 start bank and dividing by 150, which I am sure you will agree is a sensible staking plan for a laying system.

So I'm afraid my decision is to fail Sams Lucky 9 Lays, even though it has ended its trial in a small profit. This is based on the following facts:

- a) Needs large stakes to break even or see return long term
- b) Needs an aggressive staking plan to see a profit
- c) Short and long term gains are outweighed by service cost

Regardless of potential ALL systems are ultimately judged on success. And Sam's Lucky 9 Lays is no different. The long term level profits of the 7mths Sams Lucky 9 Lays has been in existence to date are just +1.29pts, I think that says it all really.

I have continued access to Sams Lucky 9 Lays selections and I will continue to monitor performance with a view to possibly reviewing again in the future.

John writes about last week's article on 3F0:
Hi,

While everyone is hyping this system I think you have given a really fair review.

League Table of Current Reviews

The systems under review have different starting banks, different stakes and some systems have variable stakes. A reasonable way of comparing the performance of systems is to work out the profit (or loss) as a percentage of the starting bank and to average this out over the number of the days of the review.

Obviously this table doesn't replace reading the reviews, because profit %age of bank per day is not the only factor in judging a system. Nevertheless, I think it gives a valid comparison and an at-a-glance way of bringing the mass of data together.

Profitability Graph

I'm including a graph of the profit being made by the front runners as a percentage of their starting bank. This gives a week by week comparative view of their progress since we started this form of the league table in newsletter #30.

It gives a representation of the volatility or dependability of each system. I've taken off the reviews that have finished. Ideally we would want a graph that increased each week by roughly the same amount. If a system or tipping service could produce that, then we would really have a winning review! At the moment, Flat Ratings Pro is still producing a steady profit.

Profit as a %age of starting bank

Free System – Analysis (Part 2)

In last week's newsletter I put the Free 3F0 system through an analysis using Adrian Massey's stats site.

The results were that from 2004 to 2009 inclusive the system made -78 points loss to Betfair estimated prices and we would also have paid a further -140 points Betfair commission, making a net loss over six years of -218 points. Not a disaster, but not a success, either.

But there is better news:-

An analysis of losing runs, for 2004 to 2009 shows that there have been 3 consecutive winners (losing lays) only 4 times in 6 years! If you know a good lay staking plan you could exploit this. 2 consecutive winners happen only 5 times a year, on average. Most winning horses (90%) are surrounded by losing ones. Chasing losses after a losing lay is a fairly dangerous thing to do, but the losing runs are low here and may be exploitable.

	Sequences of Consecutive

30+ Winners	0

And an analysis of losing runs for 2010 to 2011 show a similar 91% of stand-alone winners and 2 consecutive winners 5 times in 14 months which is the same average as for the previous 6 years:

	Sequences of Consecutive
	Successful Win Selections
1 Winner	55
2 Winners	5
3 Winners	0
5 Winners	0

Also if we compare the results to Betfair prices with the results to SP prices we get a much better percentage for the years 2004 to 2009 (2004 was still a bad year):

			Tot	tals
	Bets	Wins	Win Strike Rate	Win %Return at SP
All Selections	3173	373	11.8%	79.5%

Results broken down by Year

	Bets	Wins	Win Strike Rate	Win %Return at SP
2004	418	62	14.8%	97.7%
2005	504	64	12.7%	82.4%
2006	523	51	9.8%	67.4%
2007	585	61	10.4%	72.2%
2008	568	66	11.6%	80.3%
2009	575	69	12.0%	81.3%

And for 2010 to 2011 we get:

	Bets	Wins	Win Strike Rate	Win %Return at SP
All Selections	630	65	10.3%	69.0%

Results broken down by Year

	Bets	Wins	Win Strike Rate	Win %Return at SP
2010	576	55	9.5%	63.4%
2011	54	10	18.5%	128.7%

The losses for Jan and Feb, this year would still have tested our nerve.

So as with all lay systems, the longer prices at Betfair really hamper our attempts to Lay for a profit.

One idea worth pursuing is to place a lay bet at the SP odds, just before the off and set Betfair to keep the lay bet after the off. If the price of the 3rd fav comes in slightly during the first part of the race, your bet could well be matched at Industry Starting Price and you would then be running on the above SP figures. Of course you would lose some lay bets when the price of the donkey doesn't shorten during running, in which case you would regret not being on the lay bet.

To give yourself the extra edge and to compensate for the missed lays where the odds don't come in in-running, you could set the lay bet at one tick below SP. In-play, if a horse is doing relatively OK, the odds nearly always shorten, so you will get a Lay at slightly below Industry SP more often than not.

Of course if the odds shorten drastically then your lay horse may become a winner. But remember, horses usually lose, only one horse can win! During running, the odds of several horses do shorten and you only want your horse to shorten from Betfair SP to Industry SP, plus perhaps an extra tick.

If you can get on most of the system's selections at SP or better, you will make a profit per the above SP tables.
