INTRODUCTION

Hi Folks,

This week, like last week, we have four New Reviews. I'm also including part 3 of my Betfair article – just how accurate is Betfair?

Last week my League Table contained an error. The Killer Instinct should have shown a 10.83% profit and should have been ranked at #10. My apologies to our readers and to the author/supplier of The Killer Instinct.

I've checked and double-checked this week's table – a mystery prize for anyone who spots an error this week! OK, only joking – there is no prize. But please do let me know if my figures have any errors in them.

This week, I've also included part 3 of my article on Betfair. Parts 1 and 2 were in Newsletters #64 and #65

"The Betplan" is the star performer this week with over 120% profit in only 12 days!

We'd like to hear from you, please contact me by e-mail via the Bloggers Corner at rich@bettingssystemtruths.com

Tandem Lays – Introduction

25th August 2011

Inspector Magnifique – Introduces Tandem Lays

Hi Bloggers,

Some of you might have already heard the name of Derek Nadin, the man behind Tandem Lays.

Derek is the guy who produced the 'No.1 Lay System' claiming to be the closest to the dream of having no losing bets and having an overall 96% strike rate. 'No. 1 Lay' is sold either as a pdf-file or a tipping service, costing £40 a month, if you don't want to be bothered with selection process.

The system is not to be operated during months of May and June and to fill the gap subscribers were offered a new product the Tandem Lays selections. The Tandem Lays selections appeared to be very successful and the vendor was asked to continue with them. Since then No. 1 selections and Tandem Lays selections go together for the same price of £40 a month.

Here on LTO, we are going to test both sets of selections in one single review.

The No 1 Lay system was reviewed over on BST some while ago, and proved inconclusive, earning a neutral rating, so let's see how it gets on this time. Essentially this is a review of the Tandem Lays selections, but as they are only available by subscribing to the No1 Lay system selection service, we may as well review both at the same time.

Obviously, we have a laying tips service here. Maximum BSP price to lay the Tandem Lays selections at is 20.0, so we can expect rather high liabilities at times. Another rule is the race has to have at least 8 runners.

As a reminder, the No1 Lays have a min 10 runners, and a max odds of 17.0

No expectation of long losing runs, though when losses occur they can damage our bank severely wiping out something like a month's or even two months' profit.

The selections are mailed daily including days with no bets.

I'll be using a safe 100 pts bank of £500 for each type of selections, betting 1 pt for each selection, i.e.:

1) 100 pts (£500) for Tandem Lays

2) 100 pts (£500) for No. 1 Lays

Selections have been monitored since last Friday the 19th August, so the review will actually start from then.

NFL Betting System – Introduction

24th August 2011

Inspector DJ – Introduces NFL Betting System

Hello Bloggers,

NFL Betting System is a Baseball (Major League Baseball), Basketball (National Basketball Association) and American Football (National Football League) selections service.

The NFL Betting System website states that the selections for the National Football League have been 100 percent accurate for the last twenty-six years!!

The monthly subscription fee for NFL Betting System is $150.00 per month (approximately £97.00 per month), and additionally the manual to create the selections for the NFL costs $99.99 (approximately £65.00), which will also give a month's free access to the membership area.

Upon receipt of the selections, I will visit Oddsportal to collect the odds available. I will only use sportsbooks that have an A or B rating at Sportsbook Review (www.sportsbookreview.com).

Having seen the selections from NFL Betting System for a while, some selections of course do not win. However, there is a loss recovery plan to recoup monies lost on those selections that do not go the way expected. Results during the protracted period it has taken to set up this review, some 2 months, some looked extremely encouraging!!

The baseball selections are always advised to be made without the starting pitchers, so that the bet stands regardless, and is advised to be on the Moneyline (a straight win bet) or the Run Line (where one team gives or receives a 1.5 run handicap).

We will start with a bank of £1000, and results will be shown in two formats, to one point level stakes (which will be £10 per selection) and to advised stakes.

This review of NFL Betting System will initially last for 56 betting days, and I expect bets to be provided on a daily basis. Depending on how the trial goes during this period, the review may extend to 84 days.

The first results will be shown here shortly, and I look forward to seeing how the NFL Betting System selections perform during the review.

Until the next time,

Inspector DJ – Introduces NFL Betting System

The Horse That Should Win –

Introduction

25th august 2011

Sergeant Lucian - Introduces The Horse That Should Win

Hi Bloggers,

May I introduce you to The Horse That Should Win, from ROGER PURSSORD. It is a back and lay tipping service based on Roger's system and can be used manually or with a bot for time saving. The bot which is recommended is Mybetminder, purely because this is the bot the author uses and therefore he KNOWS that it works. The price of The Horse That Should Win is 99 pounds a month. This does not include the Bot.

The system formula uses only top rated horses and involves a special price strategy.

The selection rules for The Horse That Should Win are:

1. Selections are set out on the seller page.
2. To decide whether to back, lay or leave alone refer to the chart that defines the criteria for each course. (These criteria are constantly monitored and adjusted in the light of more information).
3. Look at each selection and note the course it is running at and follow the chart rules. Only bet early when you can be sure a horse will start (BetfairSP) within its price zone.
4. The minimum field to bet in is 6 runners
5. Once you have the daily selections the method is all about prices and their relationship to racecourses. READ ACROSS THE COLOUR CODED TABLE. The information there tells you what to do with a selection at that particular racecourse depending on what price range the selection falls into.

The initial review of The Horse That Should Win will be for 56 "betting days", and may be extended to 84 "betting days", depending on its performance. The initial bank will be 1000 points and 10 point on stake.

For this review I shall be using the Grey Horse Bot.

You can find more details about Grey Horse Bot here.

Until my next update,

The Richard Dunwoody Racing Service Introduction

23rd August 2011

Sergeant Lucian - Introduces The Richard Dunwoody Racing Service

Hi Bloggers,

I want to start with a short presentation of Richard Dunwoody, retired three-time Champion Jockey. His father George rode and trained many winners in his native Ireland, while his grandfather Dick Thrle also trained at Epsom. He rode to victory Charter Party in 1988 in the Cheltenham Gold Cup, for trainer David Nicholson. Also he won the Champion Hurdle with Kribensis, trainer Sir Michael Stoute. Several victories he had with the great Desert Orchid including two King George VI Chases and an Irish Grand National. More about Richard, his achievements and his team on the web site.

Richard Dunwoody Racing and his team offer two services and both will be reviewed here on BST:

1. PAY AS YOU WIN

2. Champions Subscription

PAY AS YOU WIN Service is a free to join service. There are simple rules for this service - the client first receives a text message and if they are in a position to bet, simply respond and receive the second text message with the betting details. For the bet accepted the client must pay the returns for a £20 stake at the Starting Price (retain the entire stake placed). For this service the tips are rated with 10 from 10, so maximum strength.

Champions Subscription Service is a professional tipping service from Richard Dunwoody Racing and the newest member of the team - Steve Simpson, three-time winner of the Coral Racing Post naps table (twice Flat Champion and once Jumps Champion). This service come with a free bonus - Racing's Best Kept Secret - Saturday Specials Service (21.5 points profit since 17/4/2010) which is available for a limited period absolutely free to new annual members of the Subscription Service.

The service will provide 3 to 4 bets a week on average, selections based on 1-to-5 points staking plan, with 5 points being the very strongest. To consistently make money from backing horses it is important that you stick to a points-based staking system. Advice is given via Members log-in area, free text message, pre-recorded phone message and email.

The Richard Dunwoody Saturday Specials Service will provide 2/3 Specials every weekend.

The price for the full membership to the Champions Service for 12 months is £695, 6 months £475, 3 months £275 and 1 month only £99.

The Richard Dunwoody Racing Services will be reviewed for 12 weeks.

Starting bank for PAY AS YOU WIN Service will be 1000 points and 100 points per bet and for Champions Subscription Service the initial bank will be 100 points and bets from 1 to 5 points.

Betfair: Truths, Lies and Statistics – Part 3

Summary of the previous two articles:

1. The consensus is that Betfair's prices are the most accurate assessment of the probability of an outcome
 2. On average we won't make a profit either backing or laying, whatever the price on Betfair
 3. - unless the odds being offered represent "value" in that they are longer than the actual probability of the result
 4. The outcome of each race or event is statistically independent of any previous races or events.
 5. Staking systems that are dependent on winning or losing "runs" ending, are statistically flawed.
 6. You can take the probability of success/failure, from this predict the likelihood of various lengths of losing and winning runs and from this work out a loss recovery or profit maximization strategy and alter your stakes accordingly (See the 1st article here...)
- A staking plan that "expects" maximum runs to happen and can allow for them, will succeed
 - If Betfair is an accurate book of true probability, you can simply use the Betfair market to find a Bookie that is offering longer odds than the actual chance (Betfair price) that the horse has.
 - Or you can use Betfair to spot horses in the parade ring or going down to the Start, that look good and whose probability of winning is increasing (odds shortening). (See the 2nd article here...)

So this week I will look more closely at Betfair's accuracy. I am using some fantastic research and an article written by Peter Webb and extracts are reproduced here with Peter's permission.

The article addresses the question "Is the Betfair exchange "efficient":

"Modern economic theory determines that where there is a free market in which goods and services are freely tradable the market will, generally, determine a market price that is "efficient"."

"On modern betting exchanges the same forces exist. The betting exchange is simply a meeting of minds and opinions on which prices are formed. There is no obligation to accept the offered price and users are free to offer or accept whatever price they wish. This should lead to efficiency..."

Peter then goes on to present a graph of his research. It covers Betfair prices between 1.01 and 2.0 – that is probabilities between 99% to 50%).

The graph has three lines:

- Implied probability = $100 \times 1/\text{odds}$
- Actual probability – historic data from the exchange. All the odds that are offered are listed and a sum of all winners at those prices is counted and divided by a count of the times that the odds have occurred.
- Adjusted probability – taking Betfair commission into account.

Betfair horse market

Actual vs implied odds

Please read Peter's article for a full description of this graph. But the key point to observe for the purposes of this article is how closely the actual probability follows the probability implied by the odds offered. So for our purposes, this proves that Betfair is "accurate" and that the odds offered more or less represent the actual chances of the horse winning.

Notice how, when commission is taken into account, the actual probability tends to run even lower below the probability offered when commission is taken into account! So even though the Betfair odds are "accurate" you will make a slight loss in the long run, due to commission payments. Peter calculates that, even at minimum Betfair commission level of 2%, you will make a "net deficit of -0.729% on average, overall, over time."

His conclusion is: "If your strategy is to make money by backing or laying something on the basis of "value" the statistics indicate that if you continue to do this over a long period of time you will likely only match the long term implied probability. Furthermore because of commission you will likely lose; the only winner here is the service provider. Therefore the edge in the market does not belong to either side of the market, but to the betting exchange in the form of commission."

"You have to conclude that in general the betting exchanges offer much better prices for users using broad backing or laying techniques. This occurs through the efficiency of the market as demonstrated by the fact that, in general, the implied probability matches the true probability of an event occurring. However, believing that that better price creates opportunity for gain by creating value is a false assumption..."

So this research supports point #2 at the start of this week's article - On average we won't make a profit either backing or laying, whatever the price on Betfair

So there we are! Betfair prices appear to be a true reflection of a runner's actual chances. This leaves us with two or three strategies.

Some people believe that, by studying form you can find "value" where a runner's actual chances are better than the odds being offered. Good luck on that one - if you are using Betfair for your betting!

There is an area where value can be found. Given that the Betfair price is an "accurate" evaluation of the runner's true chances, if you find a Bookie offering better odds than Betfair, you can assume that the Bookie has underestimated the runner's chances. The price differential gives you "value" and in the long run will make a profit, given that the Betfair price is a true probability.

For example, before the US Open Tennis started (on Monday afternoon UK time) - I checked the odds on the outright men's singles title. Betfair had Andy Murray at 6.40 whereas a major Bookie had his odds at 8.0! - a huge odds difference. Betfair said his probability of winning was 15.625%, the Bookie said his probability was only 12.5%

I backed Murray with the Bookie! If you could find enough bets like that, then over time, on average, you would make a profit. For example with 100 such bets I would win 15.625 times at 8.0 and lose 74.375 times - giving a profit of +25.00 points.

This was a particularly good difference in price, but I regularly find better odds with a Bookie than on Betfair. The website www.puntersodds.com gives you a price comparison chart for Bookie Prices and Exchange prices for all major events.

A really good time to look for these "value" bets is when the Bookie prices are first put up. Initially Bookies make their own prices for the event, or take them from the Racing Post Forecast prices. As time goes on their prices tend to average out as they balance their books, based upon the bets their customers make. Bookies also monitor Betfair, because they know what this article is telling you. They know that Betfair is "accurate". So as the event approaches the off-time, the Bookie odds will more closely reflect Betfair prices (with their extra "overround" profit, of course).

For horse racing, if you find one of these "value" bets on a horse with a Best Odds Guaranteed Bookie, then you have an insurance in case the horse's probability of winning reduces, because the "BOG" Bookie will give you the SP if it is longer than the odds you took at the time of the bet. You won't make a profit, in the long run, with Starting prices, but it will lesson your losses when a horse's probability has decreased, after your bet.

Back to the Murray bet – rather than find 100 similar "value" bets, the obvious thing for me to do after backing at 8.0 was to lay on Betfair at 6.4. By doing that I've locked in a profit of 0.34 points if Murray wins this year's open, and a profit of 0.23 points if he loses. If I'd had more time I could have optimised the Betfair stake to even the profit on both sides – but I do have a guaranteed profit whatever happens, with a slight vested interest in Murray winning! (Gives me a punter's interest in his fate).

Of course the prices on Betfair alter as well. If I read Peter's article correctly, I took it to mean he monitored Betfair prices at all times. This means that at any moment, the odds on Betfair represent a true probability of the runner's chances at that moment. This is quite a stupendous concept if you think about it!

So Betfair, as well as showing a runner's true chances, also shows if the probability of winning is increasing or decreasing as the event off-time approaches! This is where trading comes in. But that is a whole other science and this article has already become too long! LOL!

Suffice it to say that if we watch the changes in Betfair prices, especially with horse racing, during the Parade and going down to the Start, we can use Betfair as a predictor, not of the runner's chances (that will always be exactly accurate at any moment) but as a predictor of whether the probability is going to increase or decrease (odds shorten or lengthen). So we can trade the prices.

Strategies to beat the book:

1. Back with a Bookie when they have underestimated a runner's chances by setting their odds too high.
2. Back with the Bookie and lay with Betfair when you find such a price differential.
3. Use Betfair price changes as a trading tool because they will always (on average) show if a horse's chances are increasing or decreasing.

Rich

League Table of Current Reviews

Return to Contents/Index of this newsletter

A reasonable way of comparing the performance of systems is to work out the profit (or loss) as a percentage of the starting bank. Obviously this table doesn't replace reading the reviews, because profit as %age of bank is not the only factor in judging a system. Nevertheless, it is a valid at-a-glance way of bringing the mass of data together.

I've colour coded the reviews that are the currently most successful, with the colour of their profitability graph to make them easier to spot. Some of the suspended reviews have been taken off the graph.

I owe you an apology this week. The Killer Instinct was incorrectly reported on the league table. An undetected gremlin had crept into my spread sheet. Last week, the profit should have been reported at 10.83% and it should have been #10 in the table. This week, the profit is 5.38% and it is #15 in the table.

Betplan now has two reports for the 5% ratchet system at SP and at Early Odds – both doing fantastically well!

Profitability Graph

Here is a graph of the profit being made by the front-runners as a percentage of their starting bank. This gives a week by week comparative view of their progress.

It gives a representation of the volatility or dependability of each system. Ideally we would want a graph that increased each week by roughly the same amount. If a system or tipping service could produce that, then we would really have a winning review!

Admin Announcement – Fannetastic Football

26th August 2011

Hello everyone,

Gordon here, I would like to tell you about a friend of mine called Matt Hodder. Unfortunately, Matt lost his mother Anne to cancer. So he decided that in her memory he would start a Football service to raise money for cancer charities.

And so Fannetastic Football was launched.

I followed the selections from Matts service personally for most of last season, all his selections are on the under/over 2.5goals market, and I made a decent profit. So far this season, in the first 2 weekends he has been on fire!

Now, Matt has asked us here at BST and LTO if we could help him and his charitable works, by offering our readers a special deal. The deal is this. Subscribe to Matts service and receive all his selections absolutely free until the end of October. If you like what you see, it will cost just £5 per month to continue receiving the selections, by email, 7 days a week if selections are made.

I should point out this is most certainly not a “bells and Whistles” service, more like “belt and braces”, there is no Fancy website, no sales page, no Paypal or anything like like, Matt will supply you with his bank account details if you wish to become a paying subscriber, then you simply transfer £5 to his account each month.

If you would like to give it a try, and why wouldnt you?, simply follow the link below. This link I hasten to add is NOT an affiliate link, there is absolutely nothing in this for us, we are simply trying to help someone do something good in memory of their Mother, and if we can help our readers along the way, then so much the better.

So, here is the link:

We wish Matt every success with this service, and hope that he can raise plenty of money for charity.

Thanks everyone, Gordon
